SCOTT CR1 ELITE

Scott's CR1 line has received a revamp for 2012, with its five bikes receiving new graphics and a variety of spec updates. The CR1 Elite's carbon fiber frame is built with a mixed drivetrain comprised of SRAM Rival shifters and derailleurs, and a Shimano 105 cassette. A Ritchey carbon fiber seatpost, Scott's own aluminum handlebar and stem combination, Mavic Ksyrium wheels, and Continental Ultra Race tires complete the build.

Price: $2600

CATTAGLIN C13

Featuring a full carbon fiber frame and fork, Cattaglin's top-of-the-line C13 is built with Campagnolo's Super Record 11-speed drivetrain and Bora Ultra Two carbon wheels wrapped in Vittoria Corsa tires. Weighing in at a total of 830 grams, the C13 carbon fiber frame features an integrated seatpost, tapered bottom bracket, a BB30 bottom bracket and a cockpit spec'd with FSA stem and handlebar.

Price: $3295

ZULLO INQUBO

Tiziano Zullo began building bicycle frames in the 1970s, and his creations have been raced in events such as Milan-San Remo and the Northern Classics, as well as all three Grand Tours. The Inqubo is Zullo's flagship and best-selling model. It is made of Dedacciai tubes and has a Deda carbon front fork, making the complete frameset strong and stiff. Its tubes are heat-treated and shaped by Dedacciai into Zullo's own designs, and the stainless steel dropouts are also designed by Zullo. All Zullo frames are handcrafted and hand-painted in their Verona, Italy factory.

Price: $3032 (frameset)
